NEWS DEPARTMENT

The WMUA News Department has begun an extended news coverage service intended to provide for the listener an open line to all news from many sources. Besides coverage by United Press International Wire Service, the WMUA News Service provides both live and taped coverage of campus political events, such as Student Senate and Constitutional Convention meetings involving controversial issues. They are ready to bring you the events and details of any breaking news story or emergency situation arising on campus. Equipped with a portable tape recorder and two walkie-talkies with campus-wide range, as well as a police call monitor system and facilities for recording any news source through the telephone, the news team is on the scene when the news breaks.

Through telephone communications, WMUA News has access to press conferences with Governor Volpe, and to news events breaking from any part of the state. They are in the process of creating a network of news sources in conjunction with the college radio stations throughout New England. There is also a telephone source for federal government press conferences through WMUA, the American University, in Washington, D.C. Under consideration are on-the-scene reports and documentaries from Israel by a former station member.

The department is headed by News Director Ed Jewett, a sophomore government major, and Assistant Director Tom Paine, a junior English major. Quite active, in an advisory capacity, is former News Director Neil Giroux, a senior government major employed by WHMP and WMNB on a part-time professional basis.

A news analysis and commentary team will be instituted by the News Department to provide depth in international and national news on the 6:30 News Summary.

FINALS PROGRAMMING

As a service to our listeners, WMUA will present special programming during final examination week. This will consist of all night music to study by, and a series of special course reviews. Beginning on Wednesday, January 3rd, and continuing through Friday, January 12th, WMUA will air interviews with professors in introductory level courses such as, Government, and Music. These programs are intended to aid students who are studying for final exams in these subjects. Two interviews will be held each night of exam week, the first from 7 to 9 o'clock, and the second from 9 to 11 o'clock. Professors will try to present generalized study outlines. Listeners will be able to phone in questions.

At press time, confirmed dates for the course reviews are:

Wednesday, January 3
- Geology 101, 102, 103, 7-9
- Physics 101, 9-11

Thursday, January 4
- Sociology 101, 7-11

Monday, January 8
- Economics 125, 126, 9-11

Wednesday, January 10
- Government 100, 7-9
- Government 150, 160, 9-11

It is our hope that this special programming will be an aid to the students of the University so that WMUA may better serve them through final examinations week.

EDUCATION DEPARTMENT

As WMUA is licensed as a non-commerical, educational radio station, it is logical to assume that educational features are an integrated part of our daily programming. This type of programming may be loosely defined as "that which is informative rather than purely entertaining to the listener." This is our ultimate goal.

A variety of features, as shown by these examples, will demonstrate this theory. "The Sounds of Now," with Bob Sawyer, keeps the listener up to date with the latest trends in popular music, plus an analysis of the latest recordings of the famous and not-so-famous. "Beyond Antiquity," produced by the South African Broadcast System, traces the archeological evolution of man. Weekly, scientists explain their methods and conclusions as to why they believe man descended from the apes.

Different reasoning lies behind the "Children's Hour." Once a week WMUA attempts to change its focus from the University at large to the community at large in order to entertain the wee folk, although we have found that much of the University is young at heart.

Other educational features have their emphasis on service. Also, each week WMUA tapes for rebroadcast, or airs live, the major lectures and concerts on campus. The ultimate goal of the Education Department at WMUA is to inform as well as entertain the listener. Under the leadership of Education Director Jan Gougen, a junior majoring in education, the department has been quite successful.

FUTURE PROGRAMMING

It is hoped that next semester WMUA will begin broadcasting interesting course material over the air. These programs would be one hour a week per course, following the same outline as a University course, but presented in an interesting and unique manner for enrichment rather than credit.

INTENT

The need to inform its listening audience of programming has been deeply felt by WMUA. Due to the fact that the station is not on the air until 3 P.M. on weekdays, students tend to leave their radios tuned to a commercial station. Also, most listeners who do tune in do so on a haphazard basis, showing a need for publicity concerning the station's broadcast schedule. This program guide is a sample of a series of guides to be published next year if the Student Senate appropriates the proper funds to the WMUA Publicity Department.

The program guide will be used instead of a two page advertisement in the Collegian. Total cost for an entire year will be $250.00.

Eight pages in length, the guide will contain general weekly and weekend schedules and review articles of special shows broadcast since the last issue.

Feature articles on regularly scheduled shows dealing with personalities and contents of the programs are also planned. Other features include a guide to the expected specials upcoming in the next month, promotional material, information pertinent to the station, and the dates for live play-by-play broadcasts of all major university sports events. Editorial comment on issues concerning WMUA and the campus is also proposed.
